Antelope Hunt

It is a cold snowy morning on the plains of Colorado, a little unusual for mid-October. We have seven vets and soldiers anxious to put some meat in the freezer with the help of a great group of guides that have donated their time. Seven hunters head out to the fields after some great breakfast burritos that the guides prepared. Some of the vets have never hunted big game, but everyone is excited and having a good time getting to know the guides and other vets.

It's a great hunt with 100% success in harvesting antelope for the table. A big thanks to everyone who helped make this hunt possible.
